Ercanbrack Ranch house was in Upper South Fork of Provo Canyon. The Ercanbracks owned ground from South Fork to Sunday Canyon in Heber Valley and on into Wallsburg. This is the area that they ran their sheep.

At one time, Stanley H. Roberts^{Sr} was hired by Ercanbracks to use his tractor to push out a reservoir at the head of Sunday Canyon to collect rain and drain water for watering their sheep.

The beginning of the Ercanbrack Sheep operation was with W. W. Ercanbrack began with a few sheep paid to him occasionally by farmers to pay off bills owed him.

Sterling Ercanbrack followed his father in building up their herd.

Keith, son of Sterling became educated in the sheep raising science to help the effort.

Finally, Keith moved to Moscow Idaho and became a professor who taught livestock science in the college there.

The two daughters of Sterling; Bonnie Ercanbrack Dewey and her sister Ruth Ercanbrack Harmon (Bud) still have a vested interest in the South Fork Ranch, but most of the range land has now been sold off.
